

The Heiress And The Bodyguard

Blurb

When her father's death becomes a conspiracy, she inherits a billion-dollar empire - and a target on her back.

Isabelle Deveraux never wanted to run Deveraux Dynamics. She was happy writing code, far from the boardroom politics her father navigated so brilliantly. But when James Deveraux dies in a suspicious car accident, Isabelle suddenly finds herself heir to a tech empire worth billions - and surrounded by people who may have wanted him dead. Anonymous threats. A funeral arrangement delivered to her door with no sender. An executive team that seems more interested in her assets than her safety. Someone is watching. And they're not done.

Enter Noah Creed - former Special Forces, ex-government contractor, a man carrying wounds that go far deeper than the injury that ended his career. He's hired to keep Isabelle alive. Nothing more.

Except keeping his distance gets harder with every threat that brings them closer together.

As Isabelle digs into her father's encrypted files and follows a trail of corporate corruption that reaches into the highest levels of power, the danger escalates - and so does everything she feels for the man sworn to protect her. Noah tells himself she's a client. She tells herself he's an employee. But when the conspiracy threatens to destroy everything her father built, the line between bodyguard and partner - and between professional and personal - dissolves completely.

Passion and peril collide in this pulse-pounding romantic suspense.

Perfect for fans of high-stakes romance, corporate intrigue, and heroes who protect with everything they have - including their hearts.
