

A Call To Arms

Blurb

Morgan Bodine, Duke of Rossmere and one of the magical Kadeau race, has seen the Ellesmere beacon burning red, which means his king is calling him to arms. It's February, the snow is deep on the ground, and no one in living memory can remember a king summoning his supporters in such appalling conditions.

As the king's protector, champion, and friend, Morgan is under a tremendous amount of pressure. His bishop and advisors are attempting to find him a wife and encouraging him to produce an heir, but as yet, the young duke doesn't even know who he truly is. All his life, he's done what others have asked of him, but he needs to find himself first.

His neighbour, Nigel McDowell, Duke of Cottesmere, has set his sights on marrying Morgan's step-sister, claiming the Invermere army, and overthrowing the king to take the throne for himself, which has to be prevented at all costs, or it will throw the whole kingdom of Devonmere into civil war.

A series of events, challenges, and battles follow as Morgan strives to discover who he really is and help the King keep the peace. Will it all end happily or go horribly wrong?
