A Moral Choice – The Last Mirror Series

Blurb

In a world where judgement is no longer a mystery reserved for the afterlife, one invention shatters the boundary between who we pretend to be and who we truly are. When a troubled young man named Josh creates Dice—a shimmering liquid that reveals the soul's true nature—humanity is thrust into an age of revelation. One drop can transform a person into an angelic being of light...or a creature born of shadow and consequence. Some ascend. Some burn. All are exposed. But the story doesn't begin with miracles or monsters.

It begins with Nathan, a man clawing his way out of addiction, guilt, and the wreckage of his past. When he saves his brother from a life-ending mistake, he unknowingly sets in motion a chain of events that will change the face of the world as we now know it. As Dice spreads across the globe—through churches, black markets, cults, governments, and desperate hands—Nathan becomes the reluctant keeper of the last vial, the final mirror capable of judging a soul. What follows is a journey that spans cities, deserts, sanctuaries, and spiritual battlegrounds as humanity fractures into two tribes:

- * Ascendants - who glow with impossible light

- * Descended- who bear the marks of their darkest truths

And in between them stands Nathan—half-angel, half-demon, the first man to embody both sides of judgement at once.

As the world spirals into moral chaos, new faces rise: secret orders, false prophets, sanctifiers, and children born with the ability to see truth without the drug. The battle is no longer about wings or horns. It becomes a war for the soul of humanity itself. Across the series, Nathan, Josh, and a growing circle of broken, luminous survivors must confront the question: If Judgement reveals who we are...who decides who we can become?

The Last Mirror Series is a mythic, emotionally raw saga about redemption, consequence, brotherhood, and of the terrifying freedom of choice. It blends gritty realism with supernatural revelation, exploring the truth that every human carries both light and shadowed that salvation is not given but earned.
